Have Rubber Boots, Will Travel

"Not all who wander are lost."
~J.R.R. Tolkien

After 19 years as a professional brewer, and nearly 17 years as Steelhead's Brewmaster, it is time for me to move on.

With my beloved husband (Jon Graber)'s encouragement, I plan to follow the clouds of wort steam across the country, towing my camper behind me.

The Mash Hoe

Above are pictures of a garden hoe and a white thermoplastic (or high molecular density plastic) cutting board. Imagine bolting the cutting board to the blade on the garden hoe. That's the basic idea behind the mash hoe.

I've seen a lot of breweries on my trip so far. Larger breweries normally have rakes that push out the spent grain. Brewpub brewers generally use a mash hoe, a garden hoe, a shovel or a canoe paddle (which is well used at a brewery).

Magazine Article about Trip

Across America's Beerscape

By Teri Fahrendorf

If somebody had told me in January 2007 that I would quit my brewmaster position at Steelhead after nearly 17 years and depart on a five-month road trip visiting brewers and breweries across the USA, I would not have believed it. Yet that is exactly what I did.

I posted to the Forum announcing my trip and encouraged brewers to e-mail me if they wanted me to visit their breweries. More invited me than I could visit, but I tried to fit in as many as I could. My route was somewhat dictated by where relatives live. In all, I visited 70 breweries, and brewed with 37 of those.

Among the way, the trends I observed involved expansion, innovative beer styles, equipment upgrades and the impact and availability and prices of malt and hops.

Teri pulls the mash out with a canoe paddle at New Holland Brewing Co in Holland, MI.

Intern Bart Ugorowski at Portsmouth Brewing Company in Portsmouth, NH.

Bring Mom Out for a Beer Day

By Kimberly Bowker

Mom has been through Mother's Day before. She is used to flowers, Hallmark cards, brunch, and breakfast in bed. So this year, why not surprise her a little. Why not take mom out for a craft beer?

That's what Teri Fahrendorf, president of the Pink Boots Society, is planning to do on May 8. Bring Mom Out for a Beer Day, a grassroots effort launched by Teri, aims to expose moms to new tastes in beer culture. Breweries worldwide are celebrating Mother's Day with tours, free brews, and special food pairing events. It is also a new and creative way to show mom your appreciation.

"There are a lot of appreciation things going on," according to Teri. "We are appreciating beer, appreciating beer history, appreciating the brewery by seeing how beer is made, and appreciating mom. And, it's good for business."

This Mother's Day, Teri will be taking her mother in law to a local Portland, Ore. brewery for a tour and a

Tina Graber and son Jon enjoying craft beer at

Burnside Brewing Co. in Portland, OR.

Dear Teri,

Are you dreaming up your mid-winter and spring seasonal beers? Check out our new malts, listed below...

BEST MALZ RED-X from GERMANY

How cool is a completely red colored beer? Best Malz Red-X is a 12 Lovibond Munich type malt that has seen just enough roaster action to develop a deep red color. It can be used at 100% of the grist, and at that rate it provides the lovely red color you see in the photo at left.
